NIGGER HILL SLIDES

TRACK CARRIED OUT OF LINE
OVER 100 FEET WHEN DIRT
STRIKES IT.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Grand Junction, Colo., Sept. 13.—George L. Hardenburg, engineer; Charles N. Schweinmann, fireman, and two unidentified men who were "beating their way," were killed, and Russell Hager, 23 years old, of Dayton, O., who also was "beating his way," was injured fatally when Denver & Rio Grande passenger train No. 1, west-bound, was struck and wrecked by an immense landslide which crashed down Nigger hill near DeBeque, forty-two miles east of here.

The train was going at full speed when the slide struck it, turning over the engine and derailling the mail and baggage cars.

Scores of passengers were badly shaken up and bruised, but none was injured seriously. Clerks in the mail and baggage cars received the most painful of the minor injuries reported.

The part of Nigger hill which slipped from its bed and moved down upon the train and track is oil shale. The slide this morning was declared to be equal in size to the serious one of ten years ago which tied up traffic on the main line of the Denver & Rio Grande for an extended period.

A geologist who was on the train declared tonight that the movement of the mountain was started by a gas explosion 5,000 feet under the Grand river.

"An enormous mass of earth broke off from the mountain about 400 feet above the track," he said, "and slid down on the right of way. The track was moved about 100 feet out of line. There was very little rock in the mass, but it will probably take two or three days to remove the dirt."

"In the meantime, and in protection of through travel, Denver & Rio Grande passengers are being detoured over the Union Pacific railroad between Denver and Salt Lake City."
